1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claims 1 – 6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Sakamoto et al.

Regarding claims 1 and 6, Sakamoto et al disclose a seating load detecting device with bracket mounted sensor comprising a base 1 having an open top and configured to be fixed to a seat bracket 3 configured to support a load imposed on a vehicle seat 9, an arm 6 supported by the base 1 and configured to receive the load imposed on the vehicle seat, a load sensor 12 supported by the arm to detect the load imposed on the vehicle seat, a rail bracket 2 configured to support a seat rail that movably guides the vehicle seat in a vehicle front-rear direction and to connect the base to the seat rail and a load support member 4, 5 connected to the rail bracket 2 and configured to support a load imposed on the seat rail, the load being heavier than a predetermined load, wherein the base 1 is connected under the seat rail 3 with the rail bracket 2 located therebetween (See Col. 4, lines 35 – 65 and Col. 5, lines 7 – 21, See Figs. 1, 2 and 3C):

Regarding claim 2, the load support member 4 comprises a U-shaped, belt-shaped plate having an arc portion (See Col. 5, lines 2 – 6).

Regarding claim 3, the arm 6 and the rail bracket 2 are connected by a stopper pin 47, and wherein, when the load heavier than the predetermined load is imposed on the seat rail, the arc portion of the load support member is brought into contact with the stopper pin to support the load (See Col. 7, lines 33 – 39).

Regarding claim 4, the load heavier than the predetermined load is an upward load, and wherein, when the load heavier than the predetermined load is imposed on the seat rail 3, the arc portion of the load support member moves upward relative to the stopper pin 47 into contact with the stopper pin to support the load (See Col. 7, lines 27 – 31 and 39 – 52).

Regarding claim 5, the seat bracket 3 is fixed to a vehicle body (See Col. 4, lines 35 – 37).
